TEXARKANA—The annual two-day meeting of the Southwest district of the Arkansas Dental Association ended Monday afternoon after a final day of technical speech and discussion in the Hotel McCarney convention room.

Berry, Little Rock, presented a paper introducing the use of vitallium screws in setting fractures of the mandible, a new practice in modern dentistry.

A group of district dentists who recently passed state board requirements were admitted memberships. Dr. J. R. York and Dr. Frank King, both of Texarkana, were included in the group.

Dr. E. D. Henry, Hope, retiring president of the district group, conducted the 1940 elections Monday afternoon. Officers elected were Dr. Sam Ball, El Dorado, president, Dr. C. M. Gas That Kills Humans Makes Plants Grow WESLACO, Tex.—(AP)—Humane uses have been found for many World War gases, says Dr. George H. Godfrey, plant pathologist at the state experiment farm. Dr. Godfrey is using one of the gases, chloropierin, for sterilizing soils.

He said chrysanthemums planted in treated soils were larger than those growing in untreated places. The gas removes fungi and weed seeds from competition with the plant that is wanted.

Pulaski Is to Be Honored by U.S.A.

Flag Will Be Displayed Wednesday Honoring Polish Hero

General Casimir Pulaski, Polish hero who was killed 160 years ago at Savannah, Ga., fighting for liberty in the American Revolutionary War, will be honored Wednesday, October 11, by the display of the American flag on postoffices, all other federal buildings, and many private structures.

A proclamation by President Roosevelt declared:

Whereas we do honor to ourselves and our nation in honoring those sons of foreign nations who assisted in the establishment of the United States of America; and

Whereas one of these names we hold in highest esteem is Count Casimir Pulaski, who met death on October 11, 1779, in consequence of his exploits in the assault upon Savannah;

Whereas the Seventy-sixth Congress, by Public Resolution 29, approved on July 15, 1939, provided:

"That the President of the United States of America is authorized to issue a proclamation calling upon officials of the Government to display the flag of the United States on all government buildings on October 11, 1939, and inviting the people of the United States to observe the day in schools and churches, or other suitable places, with appropriate ceremonies in commemoration of the death of General Casimir Pulaski."

Now, therefore, I, Franklin D. Roosevelt, President of the United States of America, do direct that the flag be displayed upon all Government buildings on October 11, 1939, as a mark of respect to the memory of General Casimir Pulaski, and do hereby invite the people of the United States to observe that day as General Pulaski's Memorial Day and to participate with appropriate ceremonies in schools and churches or other suitable places in the commemoration of General Pulaski's death on October 11, one hundred and sixty years ago.

CINCINNATI, Ohio—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor convention voted non-concurrence Tuesday with a resolution calling for endorsement of President Roosevelt and the New Deal.

Without the debate or tumult that attended previous discussion of the Roosevelt administration, the convention upheld the resolutions committee finding that the federation could not give the "blanket endorsement" called for in a resolution submitted by the Connecticut State Federation of Labor.

Politics Future For Cape Women

CAPTOWN—(AP)—Women have a definite place in the future of politics of South Africa, Dr. A. Marais Moll, M. P., insists.

Members of Parliament have to listen to views and wishes of women constituents but there are no women on benches which consider legislation. The Wheat Control Board and the butter board are two important bodies where a woman's opinion would be of special value, he said.

Mass Meeting in New Orleans Asks Prosecutor Recall

Grand Jury Turns Against Parish Prosecutor Charles Byrne

GAMBLING PROFITS

Six Are Indicted for Evasion of Federal Income Tax

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—A mass meeting of 5,000 angry citizens which booed the name of Governor Earl Long for more than a minute broke up without disorder at the criminal district court building here Tuesday after hearing speeches denouncing District Attorney Charles Byrne and launching a movement for his recall.

Meanwhile, Byrne was busy inside the building arranging a hearing in his own defense charges filed by seven members of the Orleans parish grand jury Monday demanding that he be removed as their counselor.

6 Are Indicted

NEW ORLEANS, La.—(AP)—Income tax evasions exceeding a half million dollars in connection with an alleged slot machine racket which flourished in New Orleans for several years were charged to six persons in an indictment returned by the federal grand jury Monday.

The evasions were said to be the second largest case ever brought, next only to the $5,000,000 evasions charged to M. Y. Annenberg, Philadelphia publisher. Nine counts were brought.

Defendants included Frank Costello, described in New York as a former slot machine king; Philip Kastel, alias Harold Miller of Stamford, Ct.; Dudley Geigerman, Harold Geigerman, alias Harold Miller; James Altman, otherwise known as Jake Altman, all of New Orleans.

The government asked that bonds of $75,000 each be posted by Kastel and Costello and that the four New Orleans men be required to furnish bonds of $25,000 each. Three were arrested tonight.

The indictment recites the bet but highly profitable period when "chief" slot machines in New Orleans grossed well over a million dollars a year and where, by falsifying "partnership" in Kastel and Costello's slot machine business, the indictment charges, $229,466.34 in surtaxes were evaded.

The government charges that Kastel and Costello owned the business and operated the owners, including G. R. Brinard, now released into the scheme as "partners" when as a matter of fact, the government charges Altman was the combine's bookkeeper and the Geigermans were collectors.

Brinard, alias Moran, was a close friend of several persons ranking high on the state's political roster.

Dr. Don Smith Is Injured In Crash

Sustains Fractured Rib, Bruised, In Collision With Negro

Dr. Don Smith of Hope sustained a fractured rib and was bruised about the body in an automobile collision at 10:30 a. m. Tuesday at the Frisco railroad tracks on West Division street.

His car was struck by an automobile driven by a negro who leaped from his car and fled. The negro had not been found at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon.

The Smith automobile was badly damaged. Dr. Smith, who was riding with a Mr. Davis, city employee, was driving east on Division and the negro was driving south along the Frisco tracks.

Apparently the negro was not injured. His automobile, left at the scene of the crash, was not damaged badly. It was reported that the negro had just bought the automobile a few minutes before the crash.

Dr. Smith was removed to his home on South Elm street.

Russia, Technically at Peace, Holds Key as European War Begins Second Month

Quick Conquest of Poland Followed by Balkan Crisis

Russia's Dominance in Balkans Affects Many Neutral Nations

THE DARDANELLES

As in Last War, This Turkish Passage Again Becomes Vital

By WILLIS THORNTON

NEA Service Staff Correspondent

The war behind the war—that is, the wordy war of the diplomats—enters a new phase at the end of the first month, just as does the military war.

With the conquest of Poland an accomplished fact, the way is open to shifts in the lineup as radical as that which opened the door to war on September 1—the quick shift of Russia from the British-French to the German side.

The outstanding diplomatic fact of the war thus far is that the dominant factor is a country which is not even at war. It was Russia's pact with Germany on August 27, arranging mutual non-aggression and a trade treaty between the countries, which gave Germany the green light for the invasion of Poland on September 1.

It was Russia's armistice with Japan in Outer Mongolia September 15 and her sudden invasion of east Poland and quick agreement on division of the spoils with Germany that gave Japan the green light in resuming the conquest of China.

And it is Russia's now-dominant position in the Balkans which will determine any changes in lineup which may follow the complete conquest of Poland. Thus a country technically neutral and a peace dominator is diplomacy of her war.

The European War, enthusiastically called World War No. 2 by some, is scarcely that as yet. Britain, France, and Germany are the only countries at war. True, her associates, Australia, New Zealand, Canada, Egypt, South Africa, and North Ireland, have joined Britain. There have been none of the world-wide actions on separated fronts like the World War campaigns in Africa, Turkey, Arabia, China, and Russia.

Old lineups were immediately shattered on September 1. The German agreement with Russia broke the Anti-Comintern Pact which was supposed to have united Germany, Italy, and Japan in opposition to Soviet Communism. The latter two immediately became neutral.

The same frantic pressure from both sides immediately was applied to Italy and the neutrals of southeastern Europe. British Ambassador Sir Percy Loraine and French Ambassador Andre Francois-Poncet were constantly at the Italian foreign office. British pressure on Turkey helped hold her firm as a neutral despite the German campaign of Franz von Papen, sent there by Hitler several months before the crisis.

Russia Gets In on Spoils

By September 15, when it was clear that Hitler's armies could go through Poland clear to the Russian border in short order, Russia made her hurried turn with Japan and moved in to assure herself of her share.

Probably by prearrangement, Russian and German representatives met at Brest-Litovsk, the same town where Germany once dictated humiliating peace to Russia, to divide the spoils.

Russia got a frontier as far west as the Warsaw-Vistula line, in territory which Hitler can defend from the west scarcely better than the Poles could from the east.

Stalin won a larger Russian border along Hungary and Rumania, thus giving him a virtual veto power over further German expansion to the southeast along the Berlin-to-Baghdad route. Any further Hitler gains in that direction must be either by arrangement with or in spite of Russia.

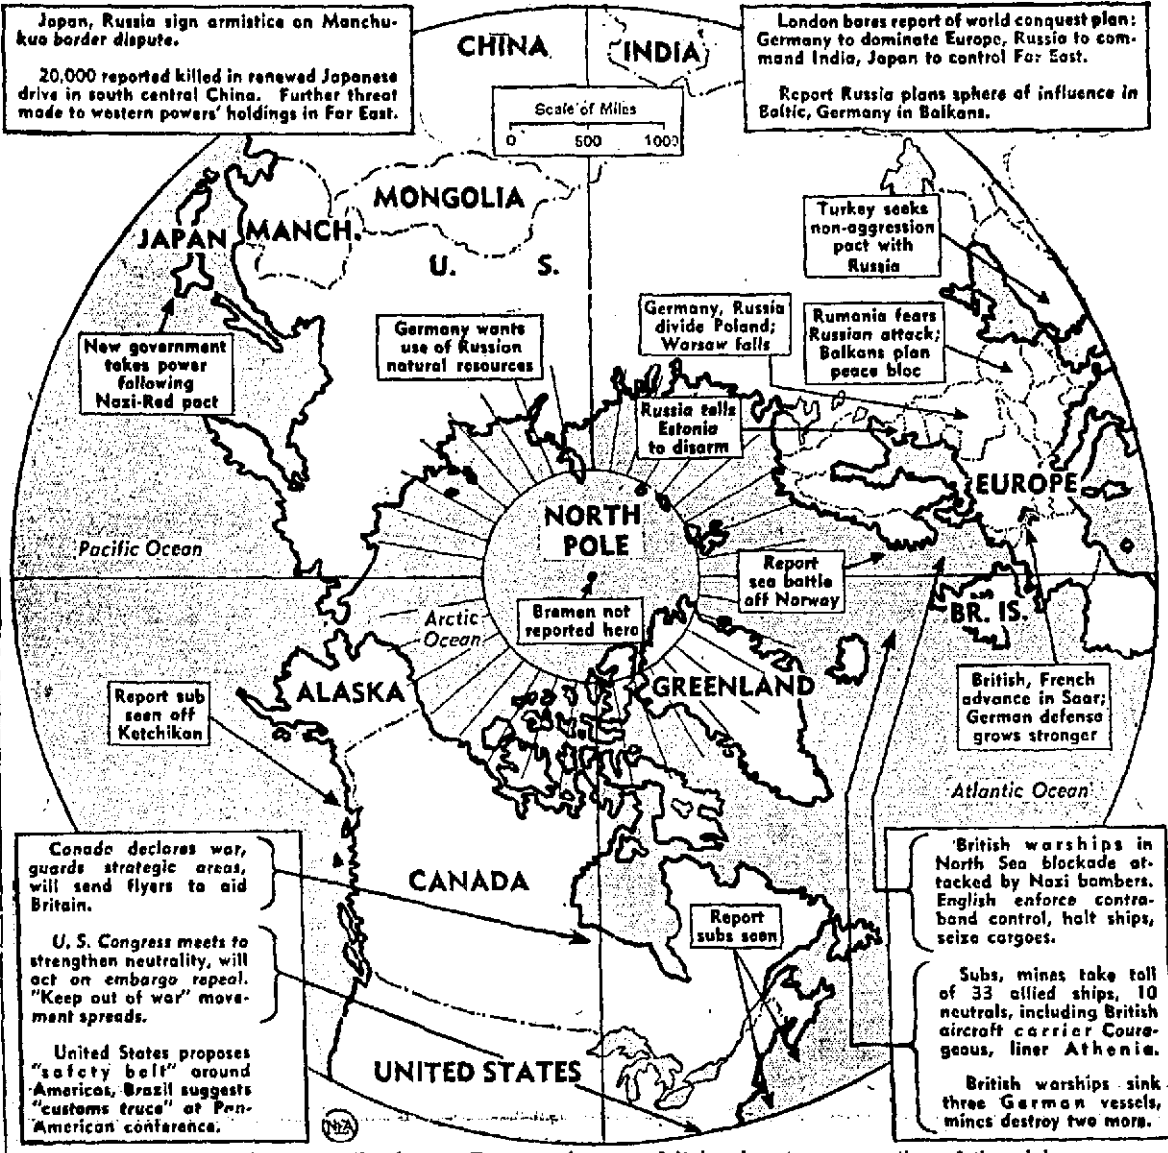

The small Baltic states, Estonia, Lithuania, and Latvia, by extension of the Russian frontier to East Prussia, were placed completely at Russia's mercy.

On September 21 the assassination of Premier Armand Collescu in Rumania brought that country to tension, with ruthless reprisals against the quasi-Fascist Iron Guard organization.

On the same day President Roosevelt of the United States put before a special session of Congress his proposals to repeal the arms embargo, a measure which would greatly help the British-French forces.

Two days later there was at Panama a joint conference of 21 American republics intent on devising ways to stay out of war together, yet defending their common rights and duties.

Iroquois Nearing America's Coast

Convoy Protects Liner Against Threats of Torpedoing

PORTLAND, Me.—(AP)—As the "threatened" American refugee liner Iroquois neared the United States Monday night navy officials declined comment on whether a search was under way for a strange submarine reported sighted within striking distance of the vessel's normal course.

A coast guard plane from the Salem, Mass., air base flew over the area where the mystery craft was reported seen Sunday morning by Arthur R. Greenleaf, Maine sea and shore fisheries' commissioner, but coast guardsmen described the flight as a routine patrol.

Greenleaf said that while cruising in a small boat 15 miles south of Portland he sighted a gray submarine moving in a southeasterly direction—a course that might cross the path of the Iroquois, which under normal conditions would pass Nantucket shoals, about 200 miles down the coast, Tuesday.

Heavily guarded by a convoy of United States naval vessels, the Iroquois is bound from Erie with 584 Americans fleeing the European war zone. She is due in New York on Wednesday.

The convoy was ordered when German Grand Admiral Erich Raeder notified President Roosevelt he had learned the Iroquois would be sunk.

District Meet of Kiwanis at Spa

Leaders Point to Part Organization Can Play in Peace

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—District leaders of Kiwanis International pointed Monday to the part their organization can play in "peace, Christianity and democracy" in speeches delivered before the district convention from Missouri, Kansas, and Arkansas.

"If ever a time Kiwanis was needed, it is now," said Sidney McMath, Hot Springs, in his welcome address. This was echoed by Henry W. Thiessen, Hutchinson, Kans., who asked:

"Shall the torch of Christianity, democracy and Kiwanis be blacked out?" Seven new clubs have been added to the district organization, secretary Fred Weiland, Jr., Topeka, Kans., reported, adding that the number of 5095 members is a new all-time high for the district.

Over 600 had registered Monday. Committee meetings were held during the afternoon. A flood show and dance were scheduled Monday night before the delegates returned to serious minded business sessions Tuesday morning.

French on Three Sides of German City Saarbruecken

German Infantrymen Attempt Advance After Big Barrage

BRITISH TO REPLY

Delay Answering Hitler, While Talking to the Dominions

PARIS, France—(AP)—French troops were reported Tuesday to have turned back numerous German assaults south of the strategic city of Saarbruecken with hand grenades and rifle fire.

The Nazi thrusts, these reports indicated, were apparently aimed at breaking the French lines which are tightening on three sides of Saarbruecken.

The German raiding parties also sought to take prisoners and obtain information on French advance positions, it was said.

A heavy artillery battle, launched by the Germans Sunday and answered by the French batteries in a 90-mile sector from the Luxembourg border to Lauterbourg, provided the background for the action.

NEW Hiter Statement

BERLIN, Germany—(AP)—Adolf Hitler declared Tuesday Germany's determined to fight to the bitter end if necessary, and once more laid responsibility for continuing the struggle on the Reich's adversaries.

In a 21-minute speech opening the Nazis winter relief campaign, the reichsfuehrer said he expressed his country's "readiness for peace" but if this is declined by the Western Allies the fight would go on.

Under relief work, he demanded, must obtain results never before achieved—not only because great tasks lie ahead created by war but also because the world must be shown, he said, that rumors of disunion within the Reich are unfounded.

"What the future may bring we do not know," the fuehrer declared, "but of this we are certain: No power on earth ever again will be able to force Germany to her knees. They will not defeat us militarily, economically, or physically."

Britain Delays Reply

LONDON, England—(AP)—Prime Minister Chamberlain postponed on Wednesday until Thursday the House of Commons speech in which he is expected to reply to Adolf Hitler's peace overtures.

Sir John Simon, chancellor of the exchequer, told the commons that postponement had been decided on to allow fuller consultation with the dominion governments.

Immediately after Sir John's announcement, Minister Sir Kingsley Wood told the huse that the Royal Air Force had made a "complete photographic map of the Siegfried line."

Finland in Danger

HELSINKI, Finland—(AP)—All civilians who can go were urged to make immediate preparations to leave the environs of Helsinki and Viipuri, in a broadcast Tuesday by Minister of the Interior Urho Kekkonen.

He said the measure was purely precautionary, but the sooner carried out the better.

The warning was given as a Finnish mission was on its way to Moscow to political problems.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden—(AP)—The first bomb-proof shelters in Sweden were under construction in Stockholm Monday night and about 100,000 Swedish army reserves were ordered to remain in service as disquiet developed in Northern Europe. The shelters, about a dozen of them, are the first ever built in Sweden.

Neutral countries about the North and Baltic seas strengthened their ties in view of a threat to their Baltic trade and showed sharp concern in the impending conversations between Soviet Russia and Finland at Moscow.

"Because of changes in the foreign situation the government has ordered that those military men who should have left the service October 15 shall remain in service until further notice," said a Swedish government statement Monday night.

It was estimated about 100,000 men would be affected. Swedish authorities estimated they could place 6,000 men with different degrees of military training in the field if necessary. The regular army strength before the European crisis was estimated at 600,000 men.

On the Swedish-Finnish frontier Monday night, the Torne valley, an area of about 4,000 square miles, was blacked out in air raid practice. Harpanda, in northern Sweden, reported Finnish aviation forces preceded bomb attacks and anti-aircraft exercises all day on the Finnish side of the frontier.

Baltic Trade Parley

As Dr. Juho Kusti Paasikivi, Finland's minister in Stockholm, completed preparations for his journey to the Soviet capital to receive Russian proposals, delegates from Norway, Sweden and Denmark arrived in Helsinki.

Will 'Peace Zone' Be as Effective as 'War Zone'?

The New World has launched an interesting experiment which is without direct and exact precedent. It will determine whether a group of neutral countries can mark out a sea zone adjacent to them into which countries at war can be prevented from carrying their war.

Because this zone has been extended several hundred miles instead of to the three-mile limit which has been the customary limit of territorial waters, there has been a wild scrambling to be first on international law.

The odd part of this is that much of the scrambling has been done by those who were the first to throw international law and precedent overboard in one bundle as soon as the World War began in 1914.

To leave hair-splitting to the barbers, it boils down to this: European countries in all their recent and most of their past wars, have calmly set aside whole slices of the ocean pathways adjacent to their countries as war zones. They have said: neutrals who enter these zones enter at their peril and under conditions which we will prescribe. "The freedom of the seas" got short shrift in any waters designated as war zones.

Now when the American nations, all 21 of them, decide to restrict freedom of the seas, to the extent of trying to exclude their regular trade lanes from the general battleground which Europe believes the seas of the world should be, there is a great deal of criticism, and a great deal of thumbing through text books on parliamentary law.

All warring nations have been informed of the decision of the American nations. We do not yet know how the policy will work. If all the warring nations would accept the wishes of the Americans in the matter there would be no trouble at all. The danger is that all will not, or that one may try to take advantage of the other's acceptance of the new limitations.

What would happen if a British cruiser should be chasing a German submarine, which ducked inside these new limits and then claimed asylum? What would happen if a German commerce-raider secretly got supplies inside these neutral waters, and ducked outside from time to time to raid French commerce? What would be the duty of American naval patrol vessels on duty in this matter, and how far are they willing to go to enforce it if it meets defiance?

We do not know, and it would probably be a mistake to say in advance. This is a new and as yet untried policy. It will be necessary to try it out, see how it works, and what sort of complications it causes.

Any policy adopted these days brings complications with it. The intent of the American nations is clear. They wish to keep free from war sufficient sea-lanes so that they can carry on their business without danger to themselves. Whether the belligerents will respect that united wish remains to be seen. The New World is feeling its way toward new conceptions of insulation from war; fortunately feeling its way hand in hand.

Vaccines Protect School Children From Variety of Contagious Diseases

Children returning to school face the ever-present danger of contagious disease. To guard against these, doctors recommend the following forms of prevention:

Inoculation of the child against whooping cough during the period of 3 to 6 months of age.

Inoculation against diphtheria at 9 months, and again at 5 years if necessary.

Vaccination for smallpox when the child reaches 1 year, and again when it enters school.

A tuberculin test to determine if the child requires control of tuberculosis at three to five year intervals, beginning with 3 years of age.

In the inoculation against whooping cough, the child is injected with a vaccine made of the dead bodies of germs known to be the cause of this disease. Several different preparations of this vaccine are now available and are recognized by the National Institute of Health.

After the child is 10 years old it

Pine Bluff Meets Grizzlies Tuesday

Fort Smith Has Heavy Squad With Three Decisive Victories

PINE BLUFF—Fort Smith High School's heavy football squad with a record of three decisive wins over Arkansas and Oklahoma teams, will play Pine Bluff here Tuesday night.

Coach Allen Dunaway will send a Zebra team averaging approximately 164 pounds into the field against a Fort Smith team whose lightest man weighs exactly that amount.

Dunaway said the Zebras are in good "physical" condition, but still seem to be suffering from a let-down following their victory over Blytheville September 29. "The physiological condition of the team is poor," Dunaway said. "The just began to round into shape Monday afternoon and will have to improve considerably overnight before they can be considered ready for Fort Smith."

Porky Avis, 213-pound tackle and Timmie Prime, backfielder, are the only two members of the Pine Bluff team who were unable to practice today. Davis has been out all week because of an ankle injury. Prime injured his knee in scrimmage Saturday. The fact that the game is the first Tuesday night affair in Arkansas in recent years is expected to contribute to a large attendance. Athletic officials expect 8,500.

"Edith," he whispered, "will you marry me?"

"I don't know, Tom," she replied coyly.

"Well, when you find out," he said rising, "send me word will you? I shall be at Eva Gordon's until ten o'clock. If I don't hear from you by then I'm going to ask her."

It is customary to use a Schick test to determine whether or not it is susceptible to diphtheria.

If so, it can be given two further doses of anti-diphtheria toxoid. This method is almost infallible in producing protection against the disease.

For the tuberculin test, the skin is cleaned with alcohol and dried. A small amount of tuberculin is introduced into the skin by the same technique that is used for smallpox vaccination.

A few days later the doctor examines the spot to determine if there is a reaction, indicated by a small, swollen, reddened area at the point where the injection was made.

The child should have an X-ray of the chest to determine whether or not there are any signs of pulmonary tuberculosis. Such examinations are now routine for school children in several states.

In times of epidemic, when measles and scarlet fever are especially prevalent in the community, it is possible to study the child's susceptibility to scarlet fever. Preparations may be injected for protection against such common diseases.

Scout Telescope to Scan the Skies

PASADENA, Calif.—(AP)—The 200-inch telescope's "scout" will be scanning the skies next spring, months before the giant mirror itself is ready.

Dr. J. A. Anderson, Palomar observatory executive officer, said the disk for the 48-inch Schmidt telescope, which will be used largely for scouting purposes, is being ground and polished at the Mount Wilson observatory optical shop.

"Its 45-foot dome already has been completed on Palomar mountain," he said, "and a correcting lens, obtained in England, will arrive shortly."

sink to discuss ways of maintaining their commerce.

The Fins were inclined to make a point of the fact that Dr. Paasikivi's plans called for a trip by train rather than plane. Airplanes were used by representatives of Estonia, Latvia and Lithuania in their journeys to and from Moscow after they were invited by the Soviet Union for conferences which resulted in Russia winning military and trade concessions. Traveling by train, the Finnish party probably would not arrive before Wednesday Dr. Paasikivi was expected to return the same way.

The Fins went ahead with their border fortifications. Finland last week called up additional reservists for "extraordinary services to strengthen the national neutrality."

The trade delegates at Helsinki were seeking a way to circumvent war dangers to commerce in the Baltic and North seas and to maintain trade as close as possible to the normal level.

Lieutenant Colonel Dryssen, the Swedish delegate, said that "adoption of new trade routes offers considerable difficulty since it obviously is harder to transport big shipments by rail than by boat, and that is why the Northern nations must get together to solve the common problem."

Germans Being Moved In

Northern disturbed by the Soviet penetration into the Baltic states were worried further by a dispatch reporting that Germany was working to repatriate Germans from Latvia and Estonia. One interpretation placed on that action by the Finnish press was that Berlin expected strong ideological penetration by Russia in at least Estonia and Latvia, as well as political and military.

One paper reported that about 75 per cent of the Germans in Estonia were expected to return to the Reich, men up to 40 years old going first. The paper said these probably would be conscripted for the German army.

Observers here expected no early conclusion of the Russian-Finnish conversations. Finnish officials insisted Russia made no demands but had only extended an invitation to exchange opinions about political and economic problems, which were not named. Foreign Minister Erkkio said the Fins "could not but say yes."

WPA to Continue, Says Harrington

National Administrator Speaks at Dedication in Arkansas

LITTLE ROCK—The WPA will be continued indefinitely, Col. F. C. Harrington, national administrator, indicated here Monday.

The statement was made by inference when, speaking at the dedication program at the new $300,000 state school for the blind, he said:

"This work (WPA) must go on. We have a long pull ahead. But with this nation's resources, I am sure we can solve the problem of unemployment."

Colonel Harrington, speaking through an amplifier system to several thousand persons who crowded the lawn of the administration building, gave credit for the works program to President Roosevelt. He commended the state for "seizing the opportunity" presented by WPA in erecting the Blind School plant and 822 other school buildings since its inception.

"WPA is not perfect yet," he said as dark clouds gathered and the first inkling of thunder rumbled ominously. "But we certainly have done something. And we can't quit now."

Hundreds of automobiles filled into a newly built road and found parking space an hour before the Little Rock High School band began playing at 2 p. m. Seats were placed on the lawn in a semi-circle. Blind children and many blind adults were provided chairs.

The microphone was placed on the front porch of the building. Behind it were seated Colonel Harrington, Governor and Mrs. Bailey, members of the school board of control, state WPA Administrator Floyd Sharp and other officials.

Miss Helen Keller, the celebrated blind and deaf educator in whose honor many spectators appeared, was absent. She remained in her room at the Albert Pike hotel until a few minutes before she was scheduled to speak at 3:35.

"Aren't you afraid you'll get seasick on your honeymoon voyage to the West Indies?"

"Oh, no; they say love prevents seasickness."

"Yes, but I'm thinking of the return trip."

Here's the Story of One Town Hall

New Hampshire Town Hall Had its Beginning in a Church

WHITEFIELD, N. H.—(AP)—This is the tale of a New England town hall and how it grew.

Ninety years ago, Aurin M. Chase, grandfather of William B. Chase, present head of the Chase colony here, built a church. The Methodists used it in the mornings and the Freewill Baptists in the afternoons. About 1874 the two congregations disagreed and built separate churches.

The town moved its offices to the former church. A little later the Maine Central railroad came in and the town fathers had to move the building, taking the occasion to dig a basement over which to place it.

About 1900 the late Dr. G. H. Morrison gave the town a clock, so the fathers built a tower for the town hall in which to put the time-piece.

Today they are busy installing indirect lighting fixtures, painting the woodwork, considering refinishing the floor and hoping to be able to install modern sanitation.

The latest improvement completed is a group of four murals—representing the seasons—done by Edgar Britton, Nebraska-born University of Iowa graduate who lives in Chicago, and Shepard Vogelgesang of Whitefield and Chicago. Money for the murals was raised at a dance for which a hillbilly orchestra played music.

SERIAL STORY

WORKING WIVES

BY LOUISE HOLMES

COPYRIGHT, 1939, NEA SERVICE, INC.

Yesterday, Marian's child is a girl. After she leaves the hospital, she goes to Randy's summer camp, where she and the baby can stretch. At last comes the day for her to leave for Portland. Dread that Dan may not want her to go. In her one perfect achievement enough to make up for all she did not do.

CHAPTER XXXI

IT was Thursday when Marian alighted from the train in Portland. A red-cap carried her bag, another offered to carry the baby. She shook her head, holding tight to the round-eyed infant. It was all so strange. Arriving in the city from which Dan had mailed his brief letters was so important a step in her plans that it left her breathless.

She had been told of a quiet, inexpensive hotel, the St. Andrews, and she stepped into a cab. Once cabs had been daily necessities, now they were luxuries. She sat back as they drove through the wide, clean streets, her eyes darting to the hurrying throng on the sidewalks. The swing of broad shoulders, the tilt of a man's hat, brought her heart to her throat. She might see Dan—she might. It was not part of her plan to see Dan—not yet.

Along Broadway, finally out of the business district and up a slight incline. At the top stood the St. Andrews Hotel. It had a landscaped garden and wide, inviting porch. The cab driver carried her bag into a charming lobby. It was homey, it greeted her with warmth. The clerk was cordial.

Marian made arrangements for a maid who would stay with the baby. She had much to do in the few days before Sunday. There was not a moment to be wasted.

Furnished apartments—she knew nothing of addresses. Consulting the clerk, she made a list and set forth. Several of the addresses were within walking distance of the hotel and she hurried along, conscious of the lightness of the air, feeling no weariness. The first apartment was too expensive, the second too dark.

"Yarnhill," she read from her list. "That's a funny name for a street. Sounds like a potato." Passing an intersection, she saw "Salmon" on the street sign and laughed again. Turning off Broadway at Yarnhill, she walked west, looking for house numbers. Expecting to find a brick building, the Chicago type of apartment, she was puzzled to find the number she sought on a large frame house. There was a lawn with a rose hedge and holly trees. It appeared to her instantly. A yard where Glad could play, roses in the spring. She rang the bell.

Marian rented the apartment. It was on the second floor of the old house. A living room, kitchen, two bedrooms, one large and one tiny, a shining new bath. It was furnished comfortably, the entire house had a home-like atmosphere, the landlady was comfortably stout. After buying supplies, Marian went for the baby. She had a satisfied feeling that they had come home.

SATURDAY morning Marian called Dan's hotel. Dan had said that he was settled in a pleasant room in the Heathman hotel. She knew he would not be there at that hour, had planned to leave her telephone number. The hotel clerk told her where she might reach Mr. Harkness—his office. Dan with an office?

Mouth dry, hands shaking, Marian called Dan's office. When he answered, she said, "This is Marian, Dan."

"Marian?" There was joy and almost fearful disbelief in the exclamation. When he spoke again his voice was cool, controlled.

"Where are you, Marian?"

She gave him the address. "Have you plans for tomorrow, Dan?"

"I expected to spend the day alone."

"Then—will you have dinner with me?" Would he say that he would come right then? He did not.

He said, "I shall be delighted. What time?" He might have been any man accepting any woman's invitation.

"One o'clock?"

"I'll be there."

THE next morning was a flutter of preparation. Removing every toy and tiny garment from the living room, Marian put the baby to bed at 12. Glad was not to be used as a lever. Possibly, but only as a last resort, cooked Dan's favorite vegetables, and made a mince pie.

At 15 minutes before one she was waiting for him, feminine and desirable in a simple frock, hair a dark swirl, eyes wide and fathomless.

He knocked and Marian opened the door. She stood looking at him. Her lips smiled, her eyes smiled, she held out both hands.

"Dan—"

He took her hands. "It's good to see you Marian—good." His voice was husky, repressed. He did not kiss her.

They talked a few minutes, skimming the surface, then she served the dinner, the table set in an old-fashioned bay window. Dan's eyes kept straying to her vivid face, puzzled.

"You've changed. Glad," he said. He'd called her Glad. Such a little thing, but so much. Her heart sang.

"I'm going to be honest with you, Dan," she said seriously. "Listen to me. When I've finished you shall say how it will be with us. When you went away I learned how very much I loved you." Tears misted her eyes and he leaned across the table to lay his hands over hers. That made it easier.

"I quit my job the last of January. I've been learning to be a home-maker and—and I've lived on your money, Dan."

"I didn't know—I should have sent more."

"It was fun, making ends meet. Oh, Dan, I've tried so hard to make myself worthy of you. Will you—can you—give me another chance?"

He rose, drawing her into his arms. "Darling—darling—" he whispered. He kissed her lips and the little hollow in her throat.

It was an hour later, they were sitting in one big chair as they had so often done, that Dan told her about his work. "I've found myself, Glad. I'm branch manager for the Coast. You won't have to scrimp and drudge."

"But I want to—for you."

He kissed her lingeringly. "I have a nice salary, my bonus will be several thousand this year—"

Marian got quickly to her feet. Her cheeks were crimson, she spoke breathlessly. "I have a bonus for you, Dan. It's the bonus I earned."

She ran to the bedroom. The baby looked up at her, sleepy-eyed. Marian caught her up and went to the door. A beautiful, radiant woman and her child.

"Do you like her, Dan? She's yours—and mine."

He sprang to his feet. In three long strides he crossed the room. "You—you didn't buy her—"

Marian laughed. "No, I didn't buy her. Look at your own red hair on her funny little head and be sure, I love," about her when you went away."

Gently, he took them both in his arms. "Oh, my dear—my dear—"

Later, Dan was sitting in the big chair, holding the baby carefully, Marian knelt at his knee. She said, "Do you know what I tell her every day? I say, 'Marian, when you grow up and get married, let your husband take care of you. If the going gets tough, you sit tight. He'll see you through.' That's what I tell her every day, Dan."

Dan leaned forward, putting his big arm around her. "I'm a lucky guy," he murmured. "Two Glads to be glad about."
